After Congress passed the Alien and Sedition Acts in 1798 — laws that criminalized criticism of the federal government — Vice President Thomas Jefferson (secretly drafting the Kentucky Resolutions) and James Madison (the Virginia Resolutions) argued that states had the right to declare federal laws unconstitutional. These resolutions launched the doctrine of nullification, which would resurface during the Nullification Crisis of 1832 and later in arguments leading to secession.

Key Passages

Kentucky Resolutions (Jefferson)

> Resolved, That the several States composing the United States of America, are not united on the principle of unlimited submission to their general government … and that whensoever the general government assumes undelegated powers, its acts are unauthoritative, void, and of no force.

Virginia Resolutions (Madison)

> In case of a deliberate, palpable, and dangerous exercise of other powers, not granted by the said compact, the States, who are parties thereto, have the right, and are in duty bound, to interpose, for arresting the progress of the evil.
