AP Short-Answer Practice

Answer a, b and c. Each part is scored on its own, so answer each one directly in 1–3 sentences with specific historical evidence.

Thomas Jefferson, Secretary of State, written opinion to President George Washington on the constitutionality of a national bank, February 1791

I consider the foundation of the Constitution as laid on this ground: That "all powers not delegated to the United States, by the Constitution, nor prohibited by it to the States, are reserved to the States or to the people." [XIIth amendment.] To take a single step beyond the boundaries thus specially drawn around the powers of Congress, is to take possession of a boundless field of power, no longer susceptible of any definition.

The second general phrase is, "to make all laws necessary and proper for carrying into execution the enumerated powers." But they can all be carried into execution without a bank. A bank therefore is not necessary, and consequently not authorized by this phrase.

Text: Avalon Project, Yale Law School (from P. L. Ford, ed., The Federalist, 1898). Excerpt. Jefferson's "XIIth amendment" is the amendment ratified as the Tenth Amendment.

a. Briefly describe Jefferson's argument about how the Constitution should be interpreted.

b. Briefly explain ONE way Alexander Hamilton or the Federalists responded to arguments like Jefferson's.

c. Briefly explain ONE way the debate over the national bank was settled or continued between 1791 and 1824.

DBQ Practice · Evidence from the Documents

PROMPT

Evaluate the extent to which the power of the federal government grew between 1789 and 1824.

Your task: Write 2–3 sentences that describe what the document on this page says and explain how it supports OR challenges an argument that answers the prompt.

What earns the point: To earn credit, describe the content of the document in your own words (do not just quote or summarize it) and use it to support an argument that responds to the prompt. On the real DBQ you would do this with at least four of the seven documents.

George Washington, Farewell Address to the people of the United States, published September 19, 1796, near the end of his second term

To the efficacy and permanency of your Union, a government for the whole is indispensable. No alliances, however strict, between the parts can be an adequate substitute. They must inevitably experience the infractions and interruptions which all alliances in all times have experienced. Sensible of this momentous truth, you have improved upon your first essay by the adoption of a Constitution of government better calculated than your former for an intimate Union and for the efficacious management of your common concerns. This government, the offspring of our own choice uninfluenced and unawed, adopted upon full investigation and mature deliberation, completely free in its principles, in the distribution of its powers, uniting security with energy, and containing within itself a provision for its own amendment, has a just claim to your confidence and your support. Respect for its authority, compliance with its laws, acquiescence in its measures, are duties enjoined by the fundamental maxims of true liberty.

Text: U.S. Senate Historical Office (S. Pub. 115-5), from Washington's final manuscript at the New York Public Library; spelling and punctuation modernized. Excerpt. "Your first essay" refers to the Articles of Confederation.
