AP Short-Answer Practice

Answer a, b and c. Each part is scored on its own, so answer each one directly in 1–3 sentences with specific historical evidence.

> Republican Contract with America, released by Republican members of and candidates for the U.S. House of Representatives, September 27, 1994
> As Republican Members of the House of Representatives and as citizens seeking to join that body we propose not just to change its policies, but even more important, to restore the bonds of trust between the people and their elected representatives.
>
> That is why, in this era of official evasion and posturing, we offer instead a detailed agenda for national renewal, a written commitment with no fine print.
>
> This year's election offers the chance, after four decades of one-party control, to bring to the House a new majority that will transform the way Congress works. That historic change would be the end of government that is too big, too intrusive, and too easy with the public's money. It can be the beginning of a Congress that respects the values and shares the faith of the American family.

DBQ Practice · Evidence from the Documents

PROMPT

Evaluate the extent to which political leaders in the 1990s agreed about the proper size and role of the federal government.

Your task: Write 2–3 sentences that describe what the document on this page says and explain how it supports OR challenges an argument that answers the prompt.

What earns the point: To earn credit, describe the content of the document in your own words (do not just quote or summarize it) and use it to support an argument that responds to the prompt. On the real DBQ you would do this with at least four of the seven documents.

Bill Clinton, Address Before a Joint Session of the Congress on the State of the Union, January 23, 1996

We know big Government does not have all the answers. We know there's not a program for every problem. We know, and we have worked to give the American people a smaller, less bureaucratic Government in Washington. And we have to give the American people one that lives within its means. The era of big Government is over. But we cannot go back to the time when our citizens were left to fend for themselves.

Instead, we must go forward as one America, one nation working together to meet the challenges we face together. Self-reliance and teamwork are not opposing virtues; we must have both.
