Kentucky and Virginia Resolutions

Drafted secretly by Jefferson and Madison · 1798

Source: Kentucky Resolutions (Nov. 10, 1798; text via American Battlefield Trust) and Virginia Resolutions (Dec. 24, 1798; text via the Avalon Project, Yale Law School). Public domain.

After Congress passed the Alien and Sedition Acts in 1798 — laws that criminalized criticism of the federal government — Vice President Thomas Jefferson (secretly drafting the Kentucky Resolutions) and James Madison (the Virginia Resolutions) argued that states had the right to declare federal laws unconstitutional. These resolutions launched the doctrine of nullification, which would resurface during the Nullification Crisis of 1832 and later in arguments leading to secession.

Connect: Compare the Federalist / Democratic-Republican split of the 1790s to the Federalist / Anti-Federalist debate over ratification in 1788.

Key Passages

Kentucky Resolutions (Jefferson)

> Resolved, that the several states composing the United States of America, are not united on the principle of unlimited submission to their General Government … and that whensoever the General Government assumes undelegated powers, its acts are unauthoritative, void, and of no force

Kentucky — Chains of the Constitution

> In questions of power then let no more be heard of confidence in man, but bind him down from mischief by the chains of the Constitution.

Virginia Resolutions (Madison)

> in case of a deliberate, palpable, and dangerous exercise of other powers, not granted by the said compact, the states who are parties thereto, have the right, and are in duty bound, to interpose for arresting the progress of the evil

Virginia — On the Sedition Act

> a power, which more than any other, ought to produce universal alarm, because it is levelled against that right of freely examining public characters and measures, and of free communication among the people thereon, which has ever been justly deemed, the only effectual guardian of every other right.

HIPP Analysis

Model answers fill the first three rows. Use them to explain the author's Purpose in the last row.

HIPP Element	Your Analysis
Historical Situation What was happening when this was written?	The Quasi-War with France (1798): the Federalist Congress passed the Alien and Sedition Acts, which made criticism of the government a crime.
Intended Audience Who was the source written for?	The other state legislatures, which the resolutions asked to join in declaring the Acts unconstitutional, and voters ahead of the election of 1800.

HIPP Element	Your Analysis
Point of View Whose perspective? Whose is missing?	Democratic-Republican leaders Thomas Jefferson (secretly, while vice president) and James Madison, who opposed Federalist power and favored a strict reading of the Constitution.
Purpose What did the author want to accomplish?

Analysis Prompts

1. SAQ — explain how/why: Explain HOW the Alien and Sedition Acts prompted the Resolutions, and WHY Jefferson and Madison kept their authorship secret. Page 1 APUSH Class Documents Class 7 - Kentucky and Virginia Resolutions
2. Identify ONE later moment in U.S. history when the nullification doctrine reappeared.
3. How do the Resolutions reflect the philosophical split between Federalists and Democratic-Republicans?

The Virginia & Kentucky Resolutions

James Madison & Thomas Jefferson · 1798

Source: Kentucky Resolutions (Nov. 10, 1798; text via American Battlefield Trust) and Virginia Resolutions (Dec. 24, 1798; text via the Avalon Project, Yale Law School). Public domain. Non-contiguous passages are separated by [. . .]; shorter cuts inside a passage are marked with an ellipsis (. . .).

> Protesting the Alien and Sedition Acts, Madison and Jefferson argued that the states, as parties to the constitutional "compact," could judge and "interpose" against federal overreach — an early assertion of states' rights.

Kentucky Resolutions — drafted by Thomas Jefferson, November 1798

Kentucky Resolutions (1798)

I. Resolved, that the several states composing the United States of America, are not united on the principle of unlimited submission to their General Government; but that by compact under the style and title of a Constitution for the United States and of amendments thereto, they constituted a General Government for special purposes, delegated to that Government certain definite powers, reserving each state to itself, the residuary mass of right to their own self Government; and that whensoever the General Government assumes undelegated powers, its acts are unauthoritative, void, and of no force: That to this compact each state acceded as a state, and is an integral party, its co-states forming as to itself, the other party: That the Government created by this compact was not made the exclusive or final judge of the extent of the powers delegated to itself; since that would have made its discretion, and not the constitution, the measure of its powers; but that as in all other cases of compact among parties having no common Judge, each party has an equal right to judge for itself, as well of infractions as of the mode and measure of redress.

[. . .]

Against the Sedition Act

That therefore the act of the Congress of the United States passed on the 14th day of July 1798, entitled "An act in addition to the act for the punishment of certain crimes against the United States," which does abridge the freedom of the press, is not law, but is altogether void and of no effect.

Against the Alien Act

IV. Resolved, that alien friends are under the jurisdiction and protection of the laws of the state wherein they are; that no power over them has been delegated to the United States, nor prohibited to the individual states distinct from their power over citizens; and it being true as a general principle, and one of the amendments to the Constitution having also declared, that "the powers not delegated to the United States by the Constitution nor prohibited by it to the states are reserved to the states respectively or to the people," the act of the Congress of the United States passed on the 22d day of June, 1798, entitled "An act concerning aliens," which assumes power over alien friends not delegated by the Constitution, is not law, but is altogether void and of no force.

[. . .]

Jealousy, not confidence that it would be a dangerous delusion were a confidence in the men of our choice to silence our fears for the safety of our rights: that confidence is every where the parent of despotism: free government is founded in jealousy and not in confidence; it is jealousy and not confidence which prescribes limited Constitutions to bind down those whom we are obliged to trust with power: . . . In questions of power then let no more be heard of confidence in man, but bind him down from mischief by the chains of the Constitution.

Virginia Resolutions — drafted by James Madison, December 1798

Virginia Resolutions (1798)

RESOLVED, That the General Assembly of Virginia, doth unequivocably express a firm resolution to maintain and defend the Constitution of the United States, and the Constitution of this State, against every aggression either foreign or domestic, and that they will support the government of the United States in all measures warranted by the former.

[. . .]

The right to interpose

That this Assembly doth explicitly and peremptorily declare, that it views the powers of the federal government, as resulting from the compact, to which the states are parties; as limited by the plain sense and intention of the instrument constituting the compact; as no further valid that they are authorized by the grants enumerated in that compact; and that in case of a deliberate, palpable, and dangerous exercise of other powers, not granted by the said compact, the states who are parties thereto, have the right, and are in duty bound, to interpose for arresting the progress of the evil, and for maintaining within their respective limits, the authorities, rights and liberties appertaining to them.

[. . .]

Against the Alien and Sedition Acts

That the General Assembly doth particularly protest against the palpable and alarming infractions of the Constitution, in the two late cases of the “Alien and Sedition Acts” passed at the last session of Congress; the first of which exercises a power no where delegated to the federal government, and which by uniting legislative and judicial powers to those of executive, subverts the general principles of free government; as well as the particular organization, and positive provisions of the federal constitution; and the other of which acts, exercises in like manner, a power not delegated by the constitution, but on the contrary, expressly and positively forbidden by one of the amendments thererto; a power, which more than any other, ought to produce universal alarm, because it is levelled against that right of freely examining public characters and measures, and of free communication among the people thereon, which has ever been justly deemed, the only effectual guardian of every other right.

[. . .]

Appeal to the other states

That the good people of this commonwealth, having ever felt, and continuing to feel, the most sincere affection for their brethren of the other states; the truest anxiety for establishing and perpetuating the union of all; and the most scrupulous fidelity to that constitution, which is the pledge of mutual friendship, and the instrument of mutual happiness; the General Assembly doth solemenly appeal to the like dispositions of the other states, in confidence that they will concur with this commonwealth in declaring, as it does hereby declare, that the acts aforesaid, are unconstitutional; and that the necessary and proper measures will be taken by each, for co-operating with this state, in maintaining the Authorities, Rights, and Liberties, referred to the States respectively, or to the people.

Words to know

compact — a binding agreement among the states that created the Constitution delegated — handed over by the states to the national government residuary mass — everything left over after specific powers were given away acceded — agreed to join palpable — obvious; easily seen interpose — step in between the federal government and the people to block an unconstitutional law