The Fourteen Points

President Woodrow Wilson · Address to Joint Session of Congress · January 8, 1918

Source: Woodrow Wilson, Address to Congress ('Fourteen Points,' Jan. 8, 1918), text via the Avalon Project, Yale Law School. Public domain.

Wilson laid out his vision for a post-war peace nine months before the Armistice. The plan called for open diplomacy, freedom of the seas, free trade, disarmament, self-determination for European nationalities, and — point fourteen — a 'general association of nations' that became the League of Nations. The U.S. Senate rejected the Treaty of Versailles in 1919–20 and the U.S. never joined the League.

Connect: Wilson pushed the League of Nations while the Senate refused. This isn't the first time Congress checked a president's foreign policy. Compare with Washington's Farewell warnings (Class 7).

Key Passages

Wilson's framing

> What we demand in this war, therefore, is nothing peculiar to ourselves. It is that the world be made fit and safe to live in; and particularly that it be made safe for every peace-loving nation which, like our own, wishes to live its own life, determine its own institutions, be assured of justice and fair dealing by the other peoples of the world as against force and selfish aggression.

Selected points

> I. Open covenants of peace, openly arrived at, after which there shall be no private international understandings of any kind but diplomacy shall proceed always frankly and in the public view. II. Absolute freedom of navigation upon the seas, outside territorial waters, alike in peace and in war … III. The removal, so far as possible, of all economic barriers and the establishment of an equality of trade conditions among all the nations consenting to the peace … IV. Adequate guarantees given and taken that national armaments will be reduced to the lowest point consistent with domestic safety.

Point XIV — League of Nations

> XIV. A general association of nations must be formed under specific covenants for the purpose of affording mutual guarantees of political independence and territorial integrity to great and small states alike.

HIPP Analysis

Model answers fill the first three rows. Use them to explain the author's Purpose in the last row.

HIPP Element	Your Analysis
Historical Situation What was happening when this was written?	The U.S. had entered World War I (1917); Russia's Bolsheviks had published secret Allied treaties, and nations debated what the postwar peace would look like.
Intended Audience Who was the source written for?	Congress, the American public, the Allies and Central Powers, and peoples seeking independence; it was a speech to Congress meant for the world.

HIPP Element	Your Analysis
Point of View Whose perspective? Whose is missing?	President Woodrow Wilson, an idealist and progressive who believed in self-determination and collective security; colonized peoples outside Europe were largely overlooked.
Purpose What did the author want to accomplish?

Analysis Prompts

1. DBQ Evidence Beyond Docs (1 pt): Identify TWO outside pieces of evidence (people, events, treaties) you could use in an essay about Wilson and the post-WWI settlement.
2. Why did the U.S. Senate reject the Treaty of Versailles? Identify the key senator and his core objection.
3. Trace ONE specific Fourteen Point that DID survive — at the Paris conference or in later international law.