The March of the Flag

Sen. Albert J. Beveridge (R-IN) · campaign speech · September 16, 1898 · excerpts

Source: Albert J. Beveridge, 'The March of the Flag' (Sept. 16, 1898), text via Teaching American History. Public domain.

Delivered during the Spanish-American War campaign in Indianapolis, Beveridge's speech is a blunt expression of late-19th-century American imperialism. He argued for permanent U.S. control of Cuba, Puerto Rico, and the Philippines on the grounds of providence, racial superiority, and economic necessity. The speech makes the racial assumptions of expansionists in the 1898 debate impossible to ignore.

Connect: Beveridge's racial framing of 'destiny' echoes O'Sullivan's 'manifest destiny' (Class 16) from 50 years earlier. What continues? What's new about 1890s imperialism?

Key Passages

On destiny

> It is a glorious history our God has bestowed upon His chosen people … a history heroic with faith in our mission and our future; a history of statesmen who flung the boundaries of the Republic out into unexplored lands and savage wildernesses; a history of soldiers who carried the flag across the blazing deserts and through the ranks of hostile mountains, even to the gates of sunset

The march of the flag

> Or that we are of the ruling race of the world; that ours is the blood of government; ours the heart of dominion; ours the brain and the genius of administration? We do but what our fathers did—but pitch the tents of liberty farther westward, farther southward—we only continue the march of the flag.

On markets

> But, today, we are raising more than we can consume. Today, we are making more than we can use. . . . Therefore, we must find new markets for our produce, new occupation for our capital, new work for our labor.

HIPP Analysis

Model answers fill the first three rows. Use them to explain the author's Purpose in the last row.

HIPP Element	Your Analysis
Historical Situation What was happening when this was written?	The Spanish-American War (1898): the U.S. had won quickly and was debating whether to keep the Philippines, Puerto Rico, and other islands.
Intended Audience Who was the source written for?	Indiana voters at a Republican campaign rally (1898 midterm elections), and the national public via newspaper reprints.

HIPP Element	Your Analysis
Point of View Whose perspective? Whose is missing?	Albert Beveridge, a young Republican politician and expansionist who believed in Anglo-Saxon superiority; Filipino and Cuban views are absent.
Purpose What did the author want to accomplish?

Analysis Prompts

1. LEQ Thesis (1 pt): Write a defensible thesis arguing whether U.S. imperialism after 1898 represented a continuity with — or a break from — earlier American expansion.
2. Identify the THREE distinct justifications Beveridge offers and rank them by force of argument.
3. How might an Anti-Imperialist League member (e.g., Mark Twain) have rebutted each?