SECTION

No Taxation Without Representation

Two Views of Taxation

The British View

Parliament

- Colonists enjoy virtual representation—Parliament speaks for all Britons.
- Taxes are fair payment for defending the empire.
- Parliament holds authority over the colonies in all cases.

The Colonial View

The Colonists

- No taxation without representation—only our own assemblies may tax us.
- We elect no members to Parliament.
- These taxes threaten our liberties as Englishmen.

SECTION

Britain Taxes, Colonists Resist

A Decade of Escalation

1765
Stamp Act
First direct tax sparks colony-wide protest.

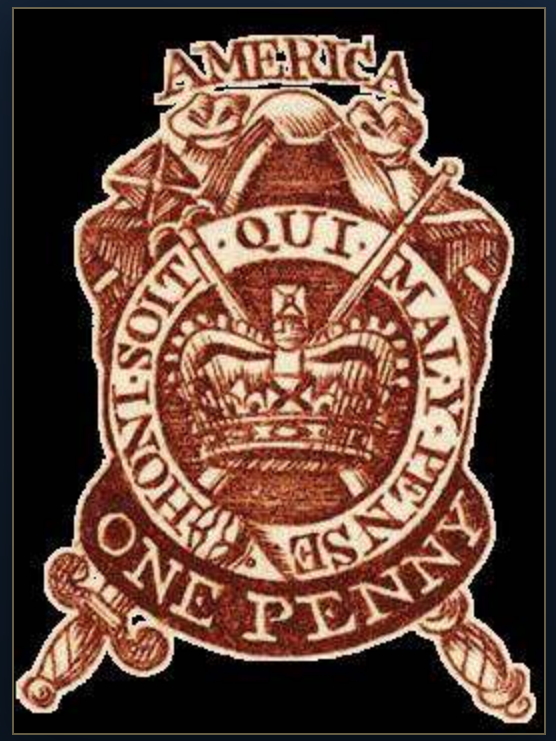

1767
Townshend Acts
New duties; met with boycotts.

1770
Boston Massacre
British troops kill five colonists.

1773
Tea Party
Sons of Liberty dump British tea.

1774
Intolerable Acts
Britain punishes Boston; colonies unite.

The Stamp Act, 1765

- Britain taxed printed materials—the first direct tax on the colonists.
- It hit every colony and every class, uniting opposition.
- The Stamp Act Congress was the first inter-colonial protest meeting.

Colonists Fight Back

- The Sons and Daughters of Liberty organized resistance.
- Colonists hanged tax collectors in effigy and boycotted British goods.
- The boycott proved the most effective weapon of all.

The Boston Massacre, 1770

- British troops fired into a Boston crowd, killing five.
- Among the dead was Crispus Attucks.
- Paul Revere's engraving turned it into powerful anti-British propaganda.

The Boston Tea Party, 1773

- The Tea Act gave Britain's East India Company a tea monopoly.
- The Sons of Liberty dumped three shiploads of tea into the harbor.
- It was a direct, defiant challenge to British authority.

The Intolerable Acts, 1774

Meant to isolate Massachusetts—instead the colonies united in the First Continental Congress

I

Boston Port Act

Closed Boston Harbor until the dumped tea was paid for.

II

Massachusetts Government Act

Stripped the colony of self-rule.

III

Quartering Act

Forced colonists to house British soldiers.

ENLIGHTENMENT IDEAS & COMMON SENSE

Philosophical Foundations

Ideas That Justified Revolution

I

Social Contract

John Locke: government exists by the people's consent.

II

Natural Rights

All people are born with rights to life, liberty, and property.

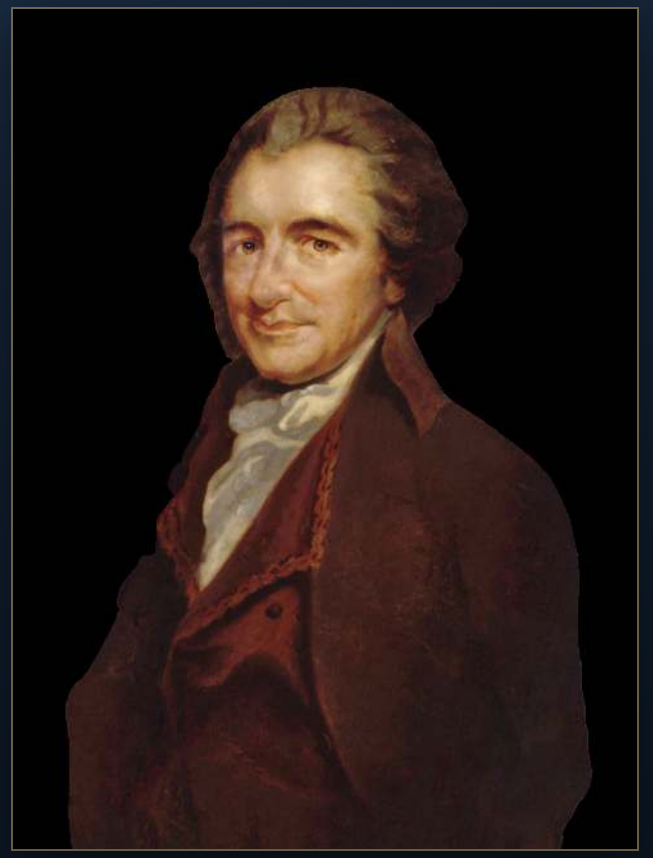

III

Right of Revolution

A government that violates those rights may justly be overthrown.

Paine's Common Sense, 1776

- Thomas Paine's pamphlet made a blunt case for independence.
- Its plain, forceful language reached ordinary colonists.
- It became an instant bestseller and shifted public opinion decisively.

From Protest to Revolution

TAXES

New Duties

Britain taxes the colonies to pay its debts.

→

PROTEST

Resistance

Boycotts, congresses, and violence spread.

→

IDEAS

Enlightenment

Locke and Paine justify breaking away.

→

RESULT

Independence

Colonists move from resistance toward revolution.

KEY TAKEAWAYS

Taxation & Resistance

1. Britain's taxes—Sugar, Stamp, Townshend, and Tea Acts—provoked escalating protest rooted in "no taxation without representation."

2. Colonists organized: the Stamp Act Congress, Sons & Daughters of Liberty, boycotts, the Boston Massacre, and the Tea Party—answered by the Intolerable Acts.

3. Enlightenment ideas and Paine's Common Sense turned resistance into a case for independence.

DISCUSS & APPLY

Taxation & Resistance

AP HISTORICAL REASONING PRACTICE

CAUSATION

Explain how Enlightenment ideas (Locke, social contract, natural rights) gave colonists a justification for resistance.

COMPARISON

Which act unified the colonies most — Stamp, Townshend, or Intolerable? Compare their effects.

CONTEXTUALIZATION

Place the Boston Tea Party in the wider context of a decade of imperial taxation and protest.
