TOTAL WAR REMAKES AMERICA—AGAIN

The Home Front

Mobilizing Industry

- The War Production Board converted factories to war output.
- American industry became the 'arsenal of democracy'—out-producing all the Axis combined.
- War spending finally ended the Great Depression.

Selling the War

- The Office of War Information spread patriotic propaganda.
- Americans bought war bonds and accepted rationing of food, fuel, and rubber.
- The whole nation was mobilized for victory.

Rosie the Riveter

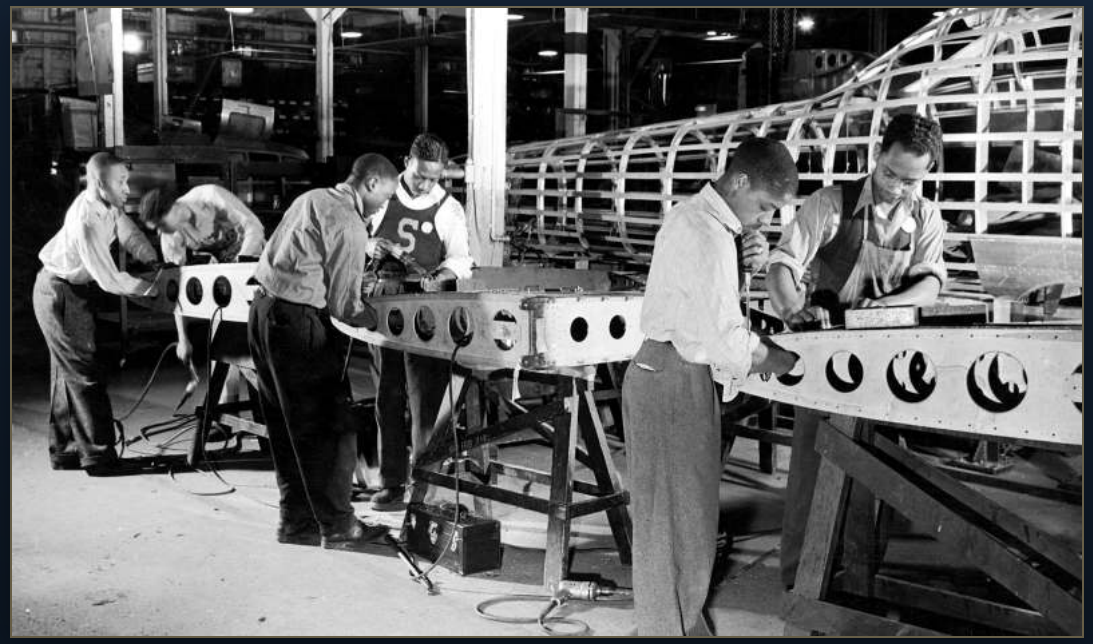

- With men at war, millions of women took factory and shipyard jobs.
- 'Rosie the Riveter' became the symbol of women's war work.
- The experience reshaped women's role in the economy for good.

SECTION

Opportunity & Injustice

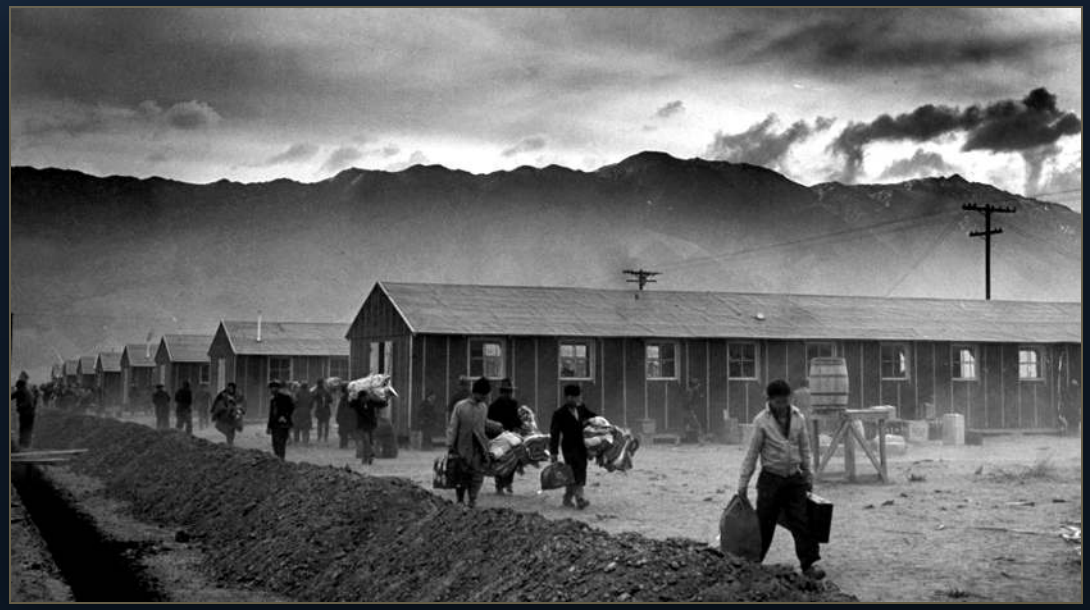

Black Americans & the Double V

- The Great Migration continued as Black workers took wartime jobs.
- The 'Double V' campaign demanded victory abroad and over racism at home.
- CORE formed, and Smith v. Allwright struck down the all-white primary.

Japanese Internment

- After Pearl Harbor, fear and racism turned on Japanese Americans.
- Executive Order 9066 forced 120,000—most of them U.S. citizens—into camps.
- In Korematsu v. United States, the Supreme Court upheld internment.

Others at War & Work

I

The Bracero Program

Brought Mexican laborers north to fill wartime farm and rail jobs.

II

Native Americans

Thousands served—including the Navajo Code Talkers—and worked in defense.

III

A Lasting Legacy

The GI Bill would send returning veterans to college and into new homes.

KEY TAKEAWAYS

The Home Front

1. The War Production Board made the U.S. the 'arsenal of democracy'—and ended the Depression.
2. The war opened new opportunities for women (Rosie the Riveter) and Black Americans (the Double V).
3. It also brought grave injustice—the internment of Japanese Americans, upheld in Korematsu.
