ERA 9

The Slave South

1848 – 1860

Cotton · the enslaved experience · resistance & community

ESSENTIAL QUESTION

How did cotton and slavery shape Southern society—and how did the enslaved resist?

KEY TERMS

Cotton is King · planter aristocracy · the domestic slave trade · Nat Turner · resistance & community

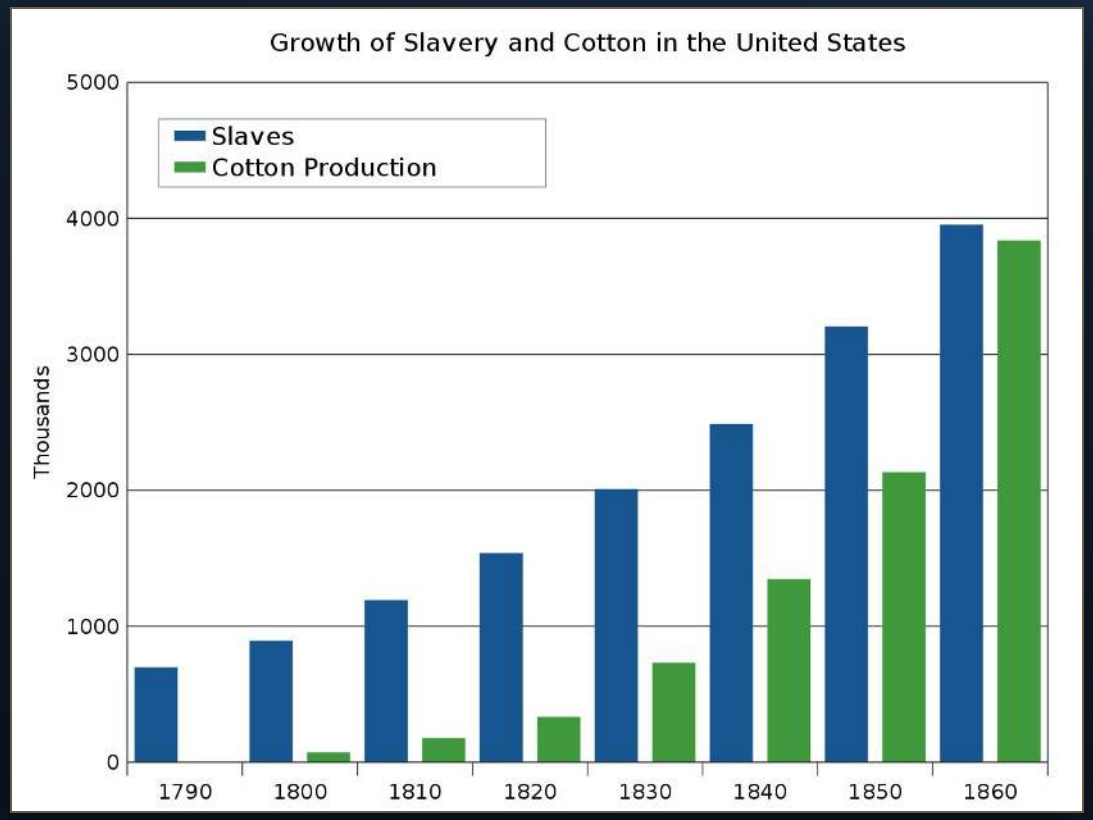

ALIGNED TO

CED Topics 4.12–4.13 · AMSCO Ch. 4.12–4.13

AN ECONOMY BUILT ON COTTON

The Slave South

'Cotton Is King'

- By 1860, cotton made up more than half of all U.S. exports.
- It was the foundation of the Southern economy—and enriched Northern mills too.
- As Senator Hammond boasted, 'Cotton is King.'

Southern Society

A small planter elite dominated a society of millions

GROUP	SHARE OF THE SOUTH	ROLE
Planter Aristocracy	A tiny elite (<2,000 families)	Owned 100+ enslaved people; ran politics & culture
Yeoman Farmers	Most white Southerners	Small farms; few or no enslaved people
Poor Whites	A large underclass	Landless—yet still defended slavery
Enslaved People	~4 million by 1860	Did the labor that powered King Cotton

The Planter Aristocracy

- Fewer than 2,000 families owned 100 or more enslaved people.
- This tiny elite dominated Southern politics and culture.
- Planters embraced paternalism—casting themselves as benevolent 'fathers.'

SECTION

Defending Slavery

From 'Necessary Evil' to 'Positive Good'

EARLY

A Necessary Evil

Founders often called slavery a regrettable inheritance.

→

COTTON

A Profitable System

The cotton boom made slavery immensely lucrative.

→

DEFENSE

A 'Positive Good'

Southerners now defended slavery as beneficial to all.

SECTION

The Enslaved Experience

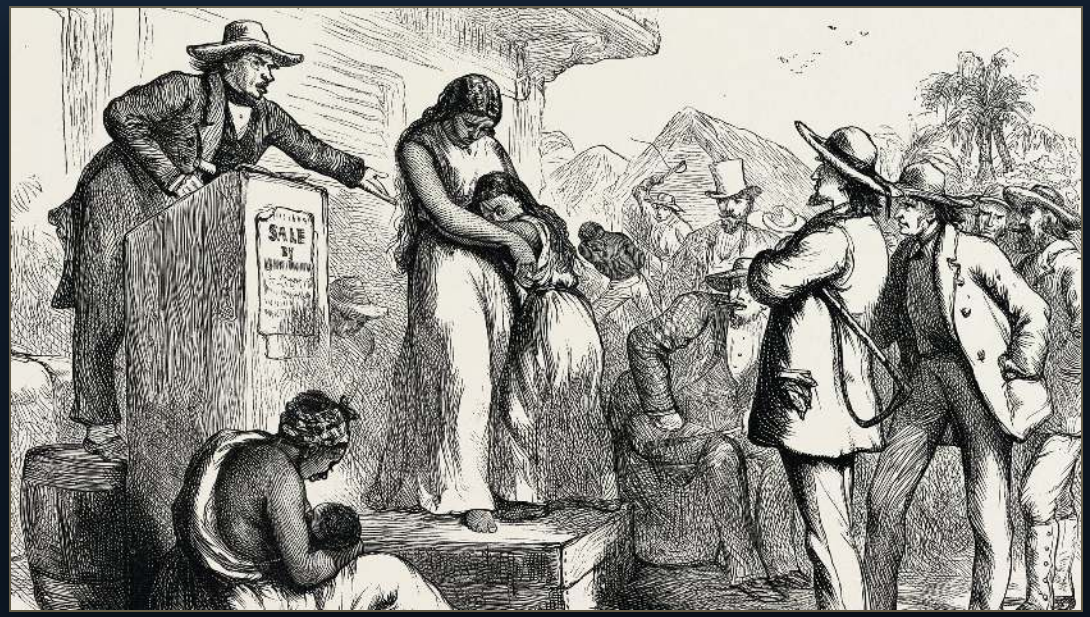

Life Under Slavery

- Enslaved people endured brutal labor under paid overseers.
- They lived in crude, dirt-floor cabins with few possessions.
- Slave codes denied them legal rights and basic freedoms.

The Domestic Slave Trade

- After the Atlantic trade ended in 1808, an internal slave trade exploded.
- More than 2 million people were sold from the Upper South to the Deep South.
- Families were torn apart—loved ones sold 'down the river.'

SECTION

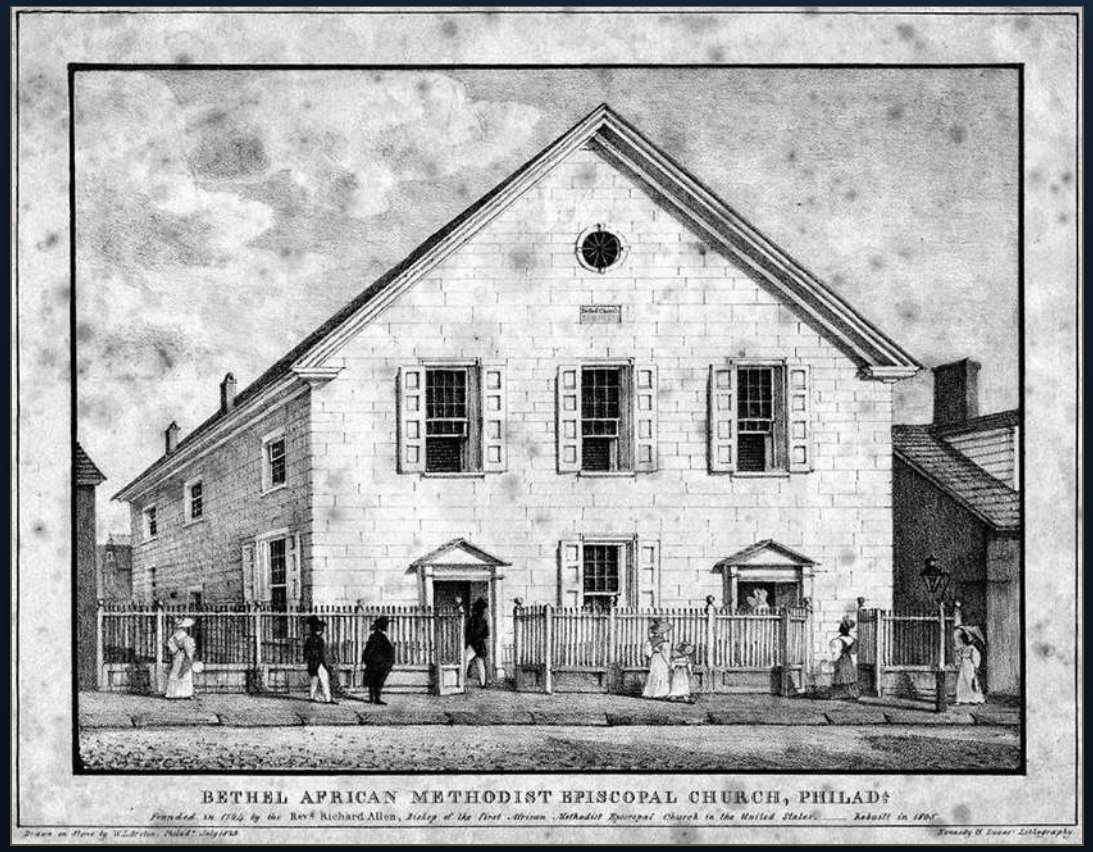

Resistance & Community

Resistance & Rebellion

- Denmark Vesey planned a major uprising in 1822.
- In 1831, Nat Turner led a rebellion that killed about 60 white Virginians.
- The South responded with brutal crackdowns and tighter slave codes.

Faith, Family & Community

- Enslaved people built strong community bonds to survive.
- Independent Black churches like the AME Church took root.
- Faith, family, and culture became powerful forms of resistance.

KEY TAKEAWAYS

The Slave South

1. 'Cotton is King'—slavery was the foundation of the Southern economy, ruled by a tiny planter aristocracy.
2. The domestic slave trade forced millions into the Deep South, tearing families apart.
3. Enslaved people resisted through rebellion (Nat Turner, Denmark Vesey) and by building enduring faith and community.

DISCUSS & APPLY

The Slave South

AP HISTORICAL REASONING PRACTICE

CAUSATION

Explain how the demand for cotton shaped the economy and society of the antebellum South.

COMPARISON

Compare the different ways—overt and covert—that enslaved people resisted their bondage.

CONTINUITY & CHANGE

How did Southern arguments about slavery shift from a 'necessary evil' to a 'positive good'—and why?

Up next — Lesson 21: A House Dividing (the Compromise of 1850 & Bleeding Kansas)